Writing and reading go hand-in-hand; it's hard to find a writer that doesn't spend countless time and effort perusing the works of others for inspiration, education, or just pure enjoyment. Writers are necessarily story-tellers with an amazing ability to weave words into unforgettable mental pictures and sagas of courage, adventure, and triumph.

Some books inform and broaden our horizons – others are exquisite mind candy that let us escape for an hour, a day, or longer from the stress of everyday life into worlds of private eyes, wizards, or Old West gunfighters. Here are the books I've recently read and have enjoyed – I think you will too. Clicking on the icon in the picture will take you directly to a description of the book and a link to Amazon if you're interested in buying or borrowing the book . . .
